Effective Interdisciplinary Study Portfolio

Task 1 'How to conduct an effective research participant interview'

Introduction

- The presentation will provide data related to the process of the research interview
- It helps to understand the relationship between the subject and the target audience.
- Provide ideas of various methods of research interview

The purpose of the presentation is to understand the effective process of conducting a research interview. The presentation will help the research interns in their professional development and meet research objectives in the future.

The relationship between the subject matter and the target audience

- The relationship between the research subject and the target audience helps to collect authentic data.
- It maintains clear communication and understanding.

It is essential for the researcher to understand and develop a clear connection between the target audience and the subject of research. It helps to collect real-time data and ensure authentication. Before selecting the research participants make sure they are aware of the research topic and can relate to it.

Importance of research interview

- Qualitative Interviews provide authentication data for research.
- It helps to analyze the real experiences of different participants
- Information is more personal experience based rather the numerical.

Interviews are part of quality research that helps to collect primary data from the market. Thus, the researcher can get different opinions related to a company's product or its services. It depends more on personal experience rather than numerical data. The main benefits of conducting a research interview are it provides original data directly from customers.

- Researchers get the opportunity to select the best method of interview for research.
- The response rate is high in a face-to-face interview in research.

While conducting face-to-face interviews participants are more likely to answer faithfully. Research also gets an idea of their attitude and behavior that helps them to analyze. Based on the purpose of the research the researcher gets the chance to select the best method of conducting an interview. In addition, interviews compared to email and surveys have a higher rate of response.

Types of Research Interview

- The format of interviews can be various types while conducting research.
- Formal and general interviews carry pre-determined questions.

The method of conducting a qualitative research interview can be different types and formats. An informal format of the interview has no pre-determined questions. In a general interview, the format follows a structure and has pre-determined questions set. It provides more clarification to them and ensures the gathering of genuine information (DeJonckheere, M. and Vaughn, 2019).

- The structured interview process has large numbers of participants.
- Online interviews ensure more flexibility while collecting data.

In open-ended interview questions, the participants provide more details and elaborate answers. In addition, the fixed response format provides a multiple-choice format and participants follow the same pattern. Structured interviews provide larger numbers of participants quickly. On the other hand, unstructured interviews provide more flexibility and deeper insights into the behavior of consumers.

Process for Conducting an effective research interview

- The first step of conducting an effective research interview is to define the objectives of the research.
- The second step is to select the interview format
- The third step is to develop research questions.

The process of conducting the research interview required a setp-by-setp approach. The first step is to define the objectives of the research clearly. Therefore, based on the research it is the responsibility of the researcher to select the best suitable format for conducting the interview. After determining the format the next step is related to the development of specific research qualifications to gather the opinions of participants (Mann, 2016).

Cont..

- The fourth step is related to identifying participants and selecting them
- The final two steps of the interview are to prepare and conduct the interview and maintain confidentiality.

Further, the fourth step of conducting research is to identify research respondents based on the subject of research. The fifth step in the process is to prepare for the purpose of the interview. For that setting is essential and it is necessary to maintain the confidentiality of participants. The final step is to conduct the interview successfully.

The amount of information and the time constraints

- Before conducting interviews the researcher must set a time limit to reach the target and complete the task.
- It will help to maintain the flow of work.

In the process of conducting the research interviews research needs to provide sufficient time to accurately collect data. After collection, they need to provide time for analysis of such information. For that, prior to conducting interviews set a time limit to complete the whole process within the time and maintain the flow of information.

Conclusion

- The researcher needs to follow a step-by-step process.
- They need to select the right process for conducting interviews.

The above discussion is providing the details of how effectively completed research interview. A researcher based on the approach of research can select any format of interview to complete the study. Further, the researcher needs to follow the step-by-step process of conducting research interviews to complete the process.

Task 2 Discuss the potential impact of the provisions contained in the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007

Source 1:
Making evaluation of the source;	The particular source has been generated through the Google search engine. This study would provide the ethical challenges in medical science with the anatomical practice and occurrence of human dissections.
The reason behind the inclusion of the source:	The specific source helpd to understand the scientific purposes related to the anatomy and ethics in the medical history and unethical history of human dissection in modern life.

Helping to answer the posed essay question:	This source has helped in understanding the unethical human dissection and the unethical practice in anatomy. The understanding of the murder act has helped in evaluating the situation more specifically.

Profile details

I am a dedicated young researcher conducting my first year of study in IT in London. Atvtime of conducting my study I developed interest and passion for material science engineering and was triggered by its prospect of research. I am highly interested to conduct a research or assist the government program to identify the impact of technology in business development. In addition, I am looking for a great working opportunity that can help me in future to conduct research on my own in this field that helps me in my future career progress. For that I am highly interested in this position to work as an intern and overcome challnages to make the research successful.

Professional details

Research student 1st year at Arden University from 2022-present

Volunteer in an NGO run by the government that provides support to underprivileged students by providing quality study materials in 2020 to present

Research student IIT London in process modeling from 2019-2022

Educational details

Completed BTech from London in 2017

Post matric from ABC school in 2015

Pre matric from xyz school from 2005-2015

Respected sir,

I am in my 1st year as a research intern at Arden University. I am looking for new opportunities and experience to enhance my skills as a researcher. I have gained interest in information technology from early childhood so that I continue my study in these files. As per my knowledge it has huge research potential. However as a fresher I am looking for some opportunities that can provide me experience and knowledge inu field. Therefore, in future my career as researcher can be developed and I can be independent researcher for that purpose I am applying for the position as volunteer researcher in this government project to face challenges and grow as an independent researcher.

c. Reflective statement

For the purpose to be an effective researcher as per my knowledge I need to develop some skills that can help me in future for Development. I have a concept of my own strengths and weaknesses. My strengths are my core skills like communication, time and task management, and patience. In addition, I also have strong language knowledge. However, as per my understanding I need to work on my leadership skills as I found it challenging while working in a group. For that purpose I am applying for a government project that helps me in developing connections with others and provides me with a good experience of team management. Again, I think I need to work more in group or take small training via online to manage team that helps me to be a good leader as well.
